LCGS MEETINGS

January 20, 2015, Local Records & Resources

LCGS member and Family History Center volunteer Jarlee McCormick will give a presentation on resources available at our local Family History Center. The FHC and their volunteers add hundreds of thousands of documents, schedules and other pertinent information to their gianormous bank of information for us to use, free of charge. They are always seeking new or additional help in the form of volunteers from their church and the community. It's the easiest thing to do. You can volunteer to do computer input working from home or at the library, or donate your time in the library doing any of hundreds of things that help the FHC to work within their budget so that they, in turn, can still offer documents, hundreds of years old for you to view in the 21st century in Lewis County Washington—always at no charge.

PLEASE NOTE.... Due to the remodeling of the PUD meeting room where we regularly attend our meetings, our meeting location HAS CHANGED until further notice! Watch your meeting notices in the newsletter for the location of each upcoming meeting. At this time meetings are at St. John's Lutheran Church, 2190 Jackson Hwy, Chehalis, WA 98532

Devin McCosh, staff member at the Olympia Timberland Library, will present "Treasures in Our Olympia Timberland Library". Join us as Devin explains the vast array of resources available in this great library which also houses the Sacajawea DAR collection. Who says you have to go to Seattle to find your Research book? I'm sure Devin & Jarlee will whet our appetite to get us on track to solve our own family mystery in 2015.

January's meeting is at 7 pm with doors open at 6:45 pm at St. John's Lutheran Church, 2190 Jackson Hwy, Chehalis, WA 98532

February 17, 2015 Jerri McCoy: Pilgrims and Patriots. Jerri was born and raised in San Diego, California. She received her Bachelor Degree in Mathematics from San Diego State University, and worked in the computer industry for 30 years before retiring a few years ago. Jerri has been active in genealogy for about 40 years. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Colonists, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Daughters of the Founders and Patriots of America, the Mayflower Society, the Associated Daughters of Early American Witches, the New England Historic Genealogical Society, the Olympia Genealogical Society, and the Washington State Genealogical Society. Jerri is a past president of two genealogical societies, and has held numerous lineage society offices.

Jerri has published two books on her family, and is working on two more. She wrote an article documenting an elusive Mayflower line ancestor, which was published in the Mayflower Descendants.

February's meeting is at 7 pm with doors open at 6:45 pm at St. John's Lutheran Church, 2190 Jackson Hwy, Chehalis, WA 98532

If you know of a seminar or event of interest to members of our society, please e-mail your newsletter editor.

Websites to Check Out

<http://www.pinterest.com/> is a good place to find information on anything on the web that you are interested in. Genealogy is no exception. Use it like a search engine by typing into the search box the topic of interest that other Pinterest users have found on the web. It's a good way to save time. Create your own free account and you can create your own "Boards". There's even a pin on How to Use Pinterest for Family History and Genealogy at <http://www.pinterest.com/pin/156711262008782582/>. Take it a bit further by getting the Pinterest web clipper for the Firefox web browser and you can pin any thing you find on the web directly to your Pinterest profile. It won't take you long to figure out how it works. Here is a good Pinterest member profile as an example of how you can organize your Pins. <http://www.pinterest.com/savingstories/> from African-American researcher and social media guru, Robin Foster.

The Bureau of Land Management has an excellent, easy to use website that provides live access to Federal land conveyance records for the Public Land States, including image access to more than five million Federal land title records issued between 1820 and the present. They have images related to survey plats and field notes, dating back to 1810. The site can be searched in many ways—by document type, by location and by identifier. The information is divided into four sections; Federal Land Patents, providing a source of information on the initial transfer of land titles from the Federal government to individuals, Survey Plats & Field Notes, providing highly detailed scans of surveys. These two sections would be of particular interest to family researchers. Land Status Records and Control Document Index (CDI) make up the remainder of the information divisions. The website is easy to use with a little practice and well worth the effort. <http://www.glorerecords.blm.gov/default.aspx>

Immigration and nationality records have changed over time. For this reason there is no one set of instructions to guide family history research. What records exist and how to find them depend entirely on when the immigrant arrived and if, when, or how they became a United States citizen. The Department of Homeland Security's U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service website outlines how to order genealogical information for your deceased ancestor's citizenship records and get them in a timely manner. The USCIS Genealogy Program is a fee-for-service program that provides researchers with timely access to historical immigration and naturalization records of deceased immigrants. It is also full of free information and a place to ask questions on your search for immigration records and understanding what was going on during your ancestor's immigration process. <http://www.uscis.gov/genealogy>

Kenneth R. Marks tells us in his blog introduction on <http://www.theancestorhunt.com/>, that "Inside you will find many of the lessons this ancestor hunter has learned as I have traveled the bumpy and satisfying road to my ancestors." The focus of his website is the use of newspapers in genealogical research, but there is much more. When you browse this website, you will see why Family Tree Magazine named him 2014 Social Media Maverick of the year. Marks also has a Facebook Group at dedicated to researching your family history in newspapers. The link to this page is <https://www.facebook.com/groups/genealogyandnewspapers>. Another of Marks' Facebook pages mirrors The Ancestor Hunt blog mentioned above at <https://www.facebook.com/TheAncestorHunt>. You will be amazed at how much you will learn.

WSGS Communicates: News From the Blog

The Washington State Genealogical Society's blog, <http://washgensoc.blogspot.com/>, was launched in May 2014. In dozens of postings since that date, the WSGS Board endorsed the continuation of the tradition of the WSGS newsletter begun in 1983 (the year WSGS was founded). The newsletter format of collecting and then disseminating genealogical information served WSGS for many years under many editors, among them Hazel Rasar and Bonnie Jean MacDonald. Here is a news item from our WSGS blog:

Ellensburg and Roslyn have a lot to offer for genealogy and history!

There are wonderful historical and genealogical treasures in Ellensburg. There is the Kittitas County Genealogical Society Library which is excellent. The Central Branch of the Washington State Archives, the Kittitas County Library and the Kittitas County Museum. They are all within blocks of each other. Come (to the WSGS Conference) early on Friday and take time to do some research or just explore. Along the way from the western side of the state, Roslyn is also a great place to visit. It has a excellent historical society <http://kittitashistory.com/sites/roslyn-museum/> and library <http://www.roslynlibrary.org/History.html> and cemetery. They are also on Facebook.

My Old House by Sandi Gaffney

My family and I moved into the "Old House" about thirty plus years ago. We moved from fairly new houses in Southern California to this old farm house on the hill. Why did we move here? It is a long story, one for another time, but basically because we knew a couple from California who lived here.

The house had four bedrooms, large kitchen, breakfast nook, dining room, living room and one bathroom (we were a family of five). It had orange indoor outdoor carpet and equally ugly gold drapes. We purchased the house on a land contract, ten per cent down and 13% interest in August of 1980. We arrived with two U-Haul trailers behind our car and jeep so were glad when the man who sold us the house left some furniture. It is on a hill out of the flood plain. Frank Huckstep was the seller and he moved to the house just down the hill. His ex-wife, Vivian Gorzelancyk Huckstep, owned the house behind us and was not living there at the time.

The old house has a rich history. It was built in 1910 according to the Lewis County Tax website. Andrew Gorzelancyk's father did the construction with the help of George Zaikowski's father (George and Alice had Kit Carson's for years). There is a well on the property and it went into service in 1918.

Andrew married Edith Winkler in 1924 and must have purchased the house from his parents around that time. As I write this I am noting some dates that do not make sense, a genealogy problem for later. Her father J. P. Winkler had Adna's "Busy Store" in 1911 along with L. W. Field.

Vivian was born in the house and her bedroom is now the master bedroom. We cut a door through to another small room that was the smoke room; they hung hams in it to be cured. We added a walk-in closet and someday the rest will be an on suite (fancy word for bathroom). The hallway upstairs is very wide and Edith hung laundry to dry in the winter. When we moved in the only lights upstairs were a single bulb hanging in the middle of the ceiling, there was also no heat in the bedrooms. A light switch in one of the bedrooms turned the light on in the chicken coop during the long winter days. The grandmother, Hedwig Gorzelancyk's bedroom was the only one downstairs which is now my sewing room.

Vivian wrote about the Gorzelancyk family for the Lewis County History Book printed in 1980. The house was originally on 165 acres of land and they raised chickens, pigs and cows along with strawberries and grain. The land was divided and sold into building lots that are now Sleepy Hollow and Curtis West, leaving .38 acres and the house.

Vivian returned to the house behind us a few months later along with Marion Stover. They became great neighbors and Marion helped us with many remodeling project as he was into wood working. They later sold the big house and moved down the hill, still on part of the original property, put in double wide modular and constructed a large shop.

Over the years I added an attached garage, great with the weather we have, all new windows, (another neighbor took some of the old windows for a stained glass project and brought me back one done) new carpet, new wiring with heat upstairs and new chimney.

I stripped layers of wall paper off the wainscoting on the stairway and hall ceiling. Vivian told me once her mother was constantly remodeling in this case wallpapering, she used carpet tacks to hold the layers up. I scrapped about ten layers off the walls in the breakfast nook, took paneling from a bedroom to Marion's shop which he cut in half, I put it up like wainscoting then replaced the top with new wallpaper. I later painted it with oil base paint and plaster on top of that.

Vivian was born in 1924 and she was two when the power was put in the house. They got their first refrigerator in 1935, it was a Grunow. Until that time they used a room in the garage I call the cooling room and the cabinet in the kitchen I use like a pantry.

I continued to visit them from time to time. Because I lived up the hill from them and drove by on a regular basis I could see what was going on. On one of the visit I was informed that they had twenty-four hour in-home care. The last and final time I went with notebook in hand with a list of questions, and very glad I did because Marion passed away a short time later.

My old house has been a great place to raise my children and have my grandchildren come to visit plus it has a million dollar view of Mt. Rainier and the Chehalis Valley when the sun is shining.

7 Great Ways to Use Your iPad for Genealogy and Family History

By Lisa Louise Cooke's Genealogy Gems

Did you get an iPad or tablet over the holidays and you're not sure what to do with it? Your iPad can be one of your best genealogy buddies. Its light weight design makes it a dream to tote (no more sore shoulders hauling a laptop bag around the library!) And it offers a gorgeous, vivid display, making it a true pleasure to review and share your findings.

1. Family Trees | Access your online family tree (and even make changes) with apps like those from Ancestry.com and MyHeritage.com.
2. Images | Take pictures of old family documents, photos, memorabilia and artifacts. From the iPad, you can upload and share them via Pinterest, Facebook, Instagram, email, or access them from your other computing devices via cloud based storage such as Dropbox or iCloud.
3. Share | Put old family pictures on your iPad to share with your relatives.
4. Capture | When you research your genealogy in libraries, use your iPad to take digital images instead of wasting time and money on photocopies. Image pages from a county or local history or take a snapshot (and a close-

- up) of a historical map. You can even take digital shots of microfilmed materials!
5. Organize | Keep track of all your genealogy sources with Evernote—and keep all your sources at your fingertips by using the Evernote app.
6. Read | Save genealogy and history e-books and pdfs to your iPad so you can read them anytime, anywhere.
7. Magazines & Podcasts | Use convenient apps to access great family history magazines and podcasts like these: the Genealogy Gems podcast; the Family Tree Magazine podcast; Curated genealogy content in Flipboard like Using Newspaper for Genealogy and Family History.
