High School Posts and Preserves WWII Letters at:

<http://www.familytreemagazine.com/insider>

Posted by Diane - Over on the FamilyTreeMagazine.com Forum, mdrogers posted a message about a project at Clover Hill High School in Midlothian, Va., to collect WWII letters, photos and diaries. The Research and Technology class transcribes the letters, archivally preserves them, and posts the text online at It Took a War.

Each letter is accompanied by a little background about the writer. You also can view photos from the front and read or watch interviews with service members.

"My father was a very patriotic man," says Rose Young, an Army nurse who was at the Battle of the Bulge.

"My brother enlisted in service first, and [my father] was proud to have a son, but how many men had a daughter that went away? So he puffed his chest all the time about the fact that he had a daughter in service."

What a great way for students to learn about history and research, and what a great site for you to peruse.

See Your Ancestor's Turf

Forum user Rtanyon tells us about a way to use Google Earth and a plat map to see exactly where your ancestor lived. See his advice in the Submit Your Tips Forum at <http://www.familytreemagazine.com/forum/forums/thread-view.asp?tid=188&mid=1182#M1182>

Are You Spending Too Much for Online Subscriptions?

A surprisingly large amount of information on subscription database sites is available free on other sites. For example, Ancestry.com charges you for WWII enlistments, 1938-1946, but they're free in the National Archives' Access to Archival Databases at <http://aad.archives.gov/aad/series-description.jsp?s=3360>.

But no-cost versions of databases can be tricky to find. Since we like you guys so much, we've posted our Alternative Access chart at <http://www.familytreemagazine.com/articles/no-v07/1107alternatives.pdf> from the November 2007 Family Tree Magazine, featuring links to free sources of 20-plus databases from paid sites (such as Ancestry.com). Reprinted from Oct. 4, 2007 Family Tree Magazine Email Update

Research London Children's Hospital Records at:

<http://www.familytreemagazine.com/insider>
Posted by Diane - I learned about this cool resource for British ancestors from the ResearchBuzz newsletter about online search engines and databases: A new Web site provides historical admission record transcriptions from Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children in London.

The free Small and Special database contains information on more than 85,000 patient admissions from the hospital's opening in February 1852, through 1914.

You can do a simple search on a name and birth year (exact or choose a range) on the home page. Or, click Search on the left of the page to search on other parameters such as patient's address, admission date and disease.

Results show the patient's name, age and address; illness, outcome (such as "died" or "relieved"), admission and discharge dates, and case notes (if any). You have to register with the site to see details such as case notes.

Under the left-hand Gallery link, you can browse photographs. Click Library to see articles about the hospital, staff, and patients such as little Minnie Ashman, who suffered from empyema.
